

Gordon Brockie has an extensive background in security risk management, primarily within specialist crime-intelligence policing, corporate business operating areas and multi-agency project management in challenging and complex environments. An innovative solver of problems with bespoke solutions, he brings a bold, dynamic and progressive approach to corporate security that enhances client, partner, senior management and staffing cohesion.

Gordon has an unwavering drive for excellence and consistently strives to exceed client expectations. Recent significant accomplishments include the designing and implementation of the UK's first Security Risk Analysis programme for urban business operating areas and the implementation of a live CCTV link from a major transportation hub & shopping centre directly to the Met Police command and control centre.

In his current role of Operations Manager for Hammersmith Business Improvement District, he has brought a fresh approach to the BID industry and their safer town model. The additional safety measures he has introduced clearly demonstrate value to the levy payer and these improvements have also led to Hammersmith BID becoming a leader in BID security initiatives.

As Chair of the London BIDs Against Crime (LBAC) group, he plays a pivotal role in addressing the threats of crime impacting the capital's business community. He also advises law enforcement and counter terrorism policing nationally on business engagement.
